It must be remembered that the national appropriation consists of stores and is not paid in cash.

Miss Valleau, Walter Edwards and Others Attribute the Poor Bustness to the Class of Plays Put on the Bourds.

Nothing new has turned up regarding the closing of the Grand Opera house, yet it seems more than probable that the doors of this popular house of amusement will not remain closed very long. All the ladies and gentlemen of the company appear to accept the position they are placed in in a thoroughly matter of fact way, and to use Walter Edwards' expression, they are not likely to starve to

A Herald man called on Miss Valleau at the Templeton last evening, and in answer to the scribe's question, "Has anything new turned up?" she replied: "We are as much in the dark as the public. I was engaged to play the remainder of the season, but did not for an instant think that it would only last the ten days that I have been here or I should never have come not for an instant think that it would only last the ten days that I have been here or I should never have come out. Three weeks prior to my closing with the Grand management I was in Europe, and after I returned to New York I had some very good propositions, but upon receiving the offer from Minnager Rogers I deelded to come here. You can imagine my surprise at my reading the notice to close, better than I can depict it. I think though that the closing is not permanaged very shortly.

However, I shan't allow the grass to grow under my feet, and if matters are not arranged at the Grand I will organize a company of my own. I stirribute the lack of business at the Grand to the plays that have been selected. They were not up to the standard which theater-goers here expect, and they simply resented it by not attending the theater. And it is under the clouk of night, after the birds have flown to tree or cover, after the cattle her found their sleiter, and the pure and the bealthful have sought their dreamless courses—it is under cover of the night that fear, and crime and sorrow walk abrond to hunt, and haunt, and terrify the timid, the sick and the erring. Night is the season of fear, night is the season of crime; night is the season of our oved ches. Between death and darkness some occult understanding seems to exist; for as night wears on toward morning the sands of life run low, and often it is with our loved ones as it was with Barkna; the tide being in our friends go our with the tide.

But in that better world the laws of the interial universe are to be supplanted by the laws of spirit. The dark shadows of night are never to invade the states of that Celestial City, no darkness shall ever dim its splendor, God himself is to be the light of this spiritual realm, and before the brightness of his presence all fear and temptation, and crime and anguish and death chall be gibered under one mighty pail of darkness, and be rolled back to hang forever over the dungeons of those who have chosen darkness rather than light.

if chosen darkness rather than light.

NO INTELLECTUAL NIGHT IN HEAVEN.

In this world, even the most brilliant and giffed minds are ruled, to some extent, by ignorance, prejudice and supersition. "Now we see through a glass darkly." now we know only in part. Truth comes to us only by flashes. All of our knowledge is fragmentary. No human mind has yet been able to seize and set forth truth in its totality. Upon every hand we are shut in by dark walls of mystery which we can neither pierce nor overleap. We wonder in the twilisht mists of doubt and only occasionally catch a glimpse of the full-orbed sun. A thousand questions crowd to our lips to which neither poet, preacher, nor philosopher can give satisfactory answer.

He is true that we have, in the realms of nature and the senses, made some of nature and the senses, made some for mature. If not her ultimate secrets, at least her orderly methods of procedure. More than this we have compelled her to be our servant; we have taken advantage of her laws, so that she carries us, and gives us light more pressing interests of the soul we are beginners. Our knowledge is meager and detached. In all matters pertaining to the higher and more pressing interests of the soul we are tell what a day will bring forth. We cannot forteful the issue of a single projuce of the library of the houghts and the motives of others. We are ignorant of the purposes of God. "Can a man by searching find hour forters of the earth, falliteth polane. We are known? Hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, falliteth polane. We are known? There is no searching for his understanding."

NO SPIRITUAL NIGHT IN HEAVEN.

Discourse by Rev. F. C. Lockwood at the lliff M. E.

SHALL BE NO NIGHT THERE

THE HEAVEN THAT IS PORTRAYED IN THE BIBLE.

There Shall Be No Intellectual or Spiritual Darkness in Heaven—The Day of Complete Triumph For the Children of God.

Owing to the absence of Dr. Holman, who has gone to California in the hope of benefitting his health, Rev. Frank C. Lockwood occupied the pulpit at Iliff M. E. church yesierday morning, taking for his text, "And There Shall Be No Night There," Rev. Xxii: 5.

Mr. Lockwood said in part:

Each day apprises us more clearly than the shalk have no other inhabitants than peace and th find themselves in the shadowy valley of humiliation.

But in that blessed kingdom to which the redeemed are to be granted abundant entrance, it will be different. No sin shall ever molest us there. No sinful being shall be allowed to invade its hallowed predicts. Love shall be entirched and every man shall seek the welfare of every other. Vice and crime and dishonor shall see away forever, but the redeemed shall walk there; and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with song and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness and sorrow and signing shall see away.

THE DAY OF TRIUMPH.

EVERY WINTER TURNS TO SPRING.
But just here, there is in human life, something peculiar and redeeming; however crushed youth's daring hope, however frequently the generous impulses of the heart are suspected or reburfed, the soul refuses to be conquered or discouraged. It soars upward on the strong pinion of hope and sees by faith a realm where every wrong is righted; where every wrong is righted; where every worne is forgotten; and where every winter turns to spring.

This ideal realm, in which, after a while, all of the shattered dreams of time are to be gathered up and realized in a life of eternal blesscieness, we call heaven. And into the most degraded and besotted minds victous of this fair kingdom occasionally burst, to gild and brighten the rough pathway of toil and ignorance. Heaven is pictured to us by the inspired writer as "a city that hath foundations, whose fullater and maker is God."

It is thus that heaven is portrayed for us in the Bible, and thus that we stremt to shadow it forth in sensuous images. But all realize that, at best, these efforts are only figurative or symbolic. We perceive that they are pictures merely; inadequate to tell of the glories of that spiritual life that is promised to the pure in heart, but sufficient to suggest to us, to some extent, the supernal joys that swalt us in the Bible and thus that we stremt to shadow it forth in sensuous images. But all realize that, at best, these efforts are only figurative or symbolic.
